

DIGITAL AGNES

Community Voices: Lauren Kelly

With Opened Mouths: The Podcast

SPEAKERS

Lauren Kelly

TRANSCRIPT

As a settler student in Screen Cultures and Curatorial Studies and an animator, I have a particular interest in story, and the ways people collaborate to tell stories. I think Indigenous curators are centering or refocusing on values that are critical to curation like collaboration, accountability, care and storytelling. And the values or methods Indigenous curators use are applicable across many fields. I am now beginning to think about how I tell stories through my cartoons and that these stories can generate conversations instead of just telling you something or giving you an answer to something. I am looking forward to attending more events and projects curated by Indigenous professionals, artists, and academics.